

SKIPPER CREDITED WITH MANY RESCUES FROM BURNING SHIP

Credited With the Aversion of A Major Maritime Tragedy

TWO KNOWN MISSING

Two Perish and Eight Others
Are Seriously Injured

BALTIMORE, July 30—(INS)—Skipper Charles O. Brooks, last to leave the ill-fated City of Baltimore, told a graphic story of the disaster. He said:

"We were bound down the bay on our regular run. There were approximately 75 passengers and 53 members of the crew aboard."

"It was getting dark."

"I was standing on the bridge when I heard cries of 'Fire!'"

"I started aft to sound the alarm but flames burst from the stern of the ship and enveloped the whole vessel. Part of the crew rushed to their fire stations while the others raced to life boats. I gave orders to launch the boats, immediately and they were soon in the water loaded with passengers."

"There was a series of explosions, but I believe these blasts came from a number of autos we were carrying and did not cause the fire. The flames forced me to retreat to the bridge. There I was joined by my steward, James C. Carter. We frantically signalled to a number of boats that were speeding to the scene trying to attract attention to the life boats."

BALTIMORE, July 30—(INS)—Heroism of fishing-craft skippers and owners of cabin cruisers and speedboats, who made a dramatic mass rescue of scores of passengers from the flaming Chesapeake Bay steamer, City of Baltimore, today was credited with the aversion of a major maritime tragedy. Only two persons were known to have perished, and only two were missing. Eight others were injured seriously.

The survivors were unanimous in their praise of the small boats which raced out to the doomed vessel's side when fire, followed by a series of explosions, broke out while the Norfolk-bound ship steamed southward, only a few hundred yards offshore from Bayside Beach.

The small craft circled around the burning ship while passengers, by twos and threes, jumped over the rail and swam to the rescue craft. Willing hands hauled in the survivors and the latter were rushed ashore at Bayside. The S. S. Arkansas, a freighter, had just passed the City of Baltimore when the fire broke out. The Arkansas swung around to aid in rescue efforts and hit one side of the burning vessel.

As the two ships separated, the Arkansas picked up five passengers and proceeded to Norfolk with them.

Dawn found the small boats still searching the bay today for the two passengers still missing from the explosion-rocked craft.

The dead:
J. R. Polikoff, 70, an attorney, of Aiken, S. C.

Wheaton, 53, a seaman, of Quantico, Va.

Origin of the fire was a mystery. Norfolk-bound, with 49 passengers and a crew of 55 aboard, the City of Baltimore left her pier at 6:30 o'clock last evening.

One hour later, while the craft was steaming placidly southward, 14 miles down the bay, flames suddenly broke out in the stern of the ship.

The cry of "Fire!" had scarcely been raised when a series of sharp explosions occurred. Within a few moments, the whole ship was ablaze, tongues of flame licking the decks and driving frightened passengers to the rails.

Captain Charles O. Brooks, master of the vessel, immediately ordered the crew to fire stations and lifeboats. Panic was averted by the cool example of the skipper and crew. Captain Brooks, mounting the bridge, calmly directed preparations to abandon the ill-fated ship.

One by one, passengers were handed out lifebelts by the skipper and crew. Many of those with lifebelts strapped around them jumped overboard where small craft, racing to the scene, picked them up and hurried them ashore.

Captain Brooks, true to the tradition of the sea, was the last man to leave the flaming ship. Deserted, a fire-scarred, smoke-blackened hulk, the City of Baltimore drifted ashore today at Bayside Beach on the western shore of Chesapeake Bay.

A major tragedy with a large loss of life was averted by the motor-boats and fishing craft which converged on the burning vessel from all parts of the bay. These small boats circled the ship, picking up passengers as they plunged into the water.

One group of 20 passengers, herded forward inch by inch as the flames

Taxi Drivers May Strike

Philadelphia, July 30—A strike of taxicab drivers loomed here today after 1100 drivers, virtually every taxi operator of the Yellow Cab Company, voted almost unanimously to empower the strike committee of their union, an A. F. of L. affiliate to "call a strike at any time after August 5."

The present contract, under which the cab operators are guaranteed $12 for a six day, 60 hour week and 40% commission on total fares, expires August 5.

Fred Mayer, president of the union, said drivers average $19 weekly, and that the Union now seeks a $25 weekly guarantee for a five day 50 hour week, with a commission of 50%. Thus far, it was reported, the company's best offer has been guarantee of $15 and 44% commission.

Reorganizing Famous Army

Peiping, July 30—China's famous 29th Route army scattered throughout north China under threat of Japanese aggression, is now being reorganized to resist the Japanese "invasion," Chinese authorities said today.

With hundreds of Japanese troops pouring into the city in motorized columns, Peiping, especially the Northwest quarter, is completely under Japanese domination.

All strategic points from Peiping to the sea are controlled by Japanese forces.

Twenty-five Japanese fighting and bombing airplanes landed today near the old summer palace of the Emperor.

WARFARE THUNDERS ANEW IN TIENTSIN

Dispatches Say Chinese Attack Brought Immediate Japanese Reply

NEW ARTILLERY DUEL

By James R. Young

I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

TOKYO, July 30—(INS)—Warfare in Tientsin, already scarred and blasted by bombs and shells, thundered anew today as Chinese troops bombarded the Japanese concession.

Dispatches to Tokyo said the Chinese attack brought an immediate Japanese reply, and a fierce artillery duel continued until 6 a. m.

Chinese forces, it was reported, also attacked a Japanese cotton mill at Tientsin, but Japanese troops repulsed this assault.

TIENTSIN, July 30—(INS)—A new artillery duel between Chinese and Japanese batteries threw the Chinese quarter of Tientsin into another frenzy of fear today after large sections of the city had been laid waste by Japanese bombs and shells.

Guns within the Japanese concession and at Chinese strongholds roared and thundered until shortly after dawn, when the firing ceased, with the Japanese apparently in full control.

A few hours later Chinese militiamen began returning their arms to the armories—an act taken as a sign that they have given up the fight against the Japanese as lost.

Everywhere there were signs that Chinese resistance has been virtually abandoned. A strong force of Japanese were in control of the Tientsin east station, and in that region Japanese officials said, only a few Chinese snipers remained to be "mopped up."

SUMMER SCHOOL CLOSSES FOR TERM AT BENSALEM

One Hundred and Thirty-Seven Passing Grades and
Only 13 Failures

WAS A GREAT SUCCESS

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, July 30—Bensalem Township's first summer school closed here Wednesday after a six weeks' session that has been declared satisfactory by Superintendent of Bensalem Schools, S. K. Faust, students, teachers, and Bensalem residents alike. One hundred and thirty-seven passing grades were registered, as against only 13 failures.

According to the statement given by Mr. Faust, the summer school "was very satisfactory and well managed, and I would like to see the same thing next year."

"Classes were small," the Superintendent said, "and each of the students was able to get individual attention. It was this individual attention, no doubt, that gave the pupils more courage in themselves to do good work."

"The students enrolled appeared very happy and enjoyed their work immensely. Some of these students who were lost in larger groups blossomed out in the summer school and gained great confidence in themselves. It is the gaining of this confidence, as well as passing subjects, that will benefit these students when they return to regular classes in the fall."

Final examinations were held on Tuesday. On Monday afternoon the group enjoyed an outing and picnic at the Columbus Country Club, Eddington.

The teaching staff was headed by Mr. Muzey, instructor at Temple University. Twelve other teachers, some gaining required practice teaching and others with their degrees, completed the faculty. Three teachers were in charge of the elementary classes. The remaining 9 teachers taught high school classes.

Classes began at 8:30 in the morning. There were two periods each morning, the final period closing at 12:15. Each of the teachers conducted two morning classes.

A great variety of subjects were taught, some students taking only one subject while others took two.

FRANCIS PYLE RETIRES

NEWTOWN, July 30—On August 1st Howard M. Buckman, of Swarthmore, who in April was appointed business manager of George School, will assume his new duties. Mr. Buckman succeeds Francis C. Pyle, who retires after 33 years of efficient service. Mr. and Mrs. Pyle plan to travel for sometime.

Mr. Buckman is the son of Franklin D. Buckman, of Trenton, N. J., and was born in Newtown.

He was graduated from Swarthmore College in 1914 and received his master's degree in education from the University of Pennsylvania in 1918. After graduation he taught social science, German and physical education in the high school at Hightstown, N. J., for four years. Following the war he served as advertising manager, office manager, and assistant to the director of the Swarthmore Chautauqua Association for ten years, later becoming vice-president of the Ullman Advertising Agency. It is from a position as advertising manager of the F. J. Stokes Machine Company in Philadelphia that he comes to George School.

Firemen Are Called Three Times During Afternoon

Bristol Consolidated Fire Department was called out three times yesterday afternoon. The calls were for a truck fire on Swain street; a grass fire at Wilson avenue and Madison street, and a rubbish fire at the rear of 242 Buckley street.

The truck, harmed by back-firing, was owned by Francis Gallagher, Buckley street. The approximate damage is given at $20. Damage was confined to the section around the engine.

ZIGZAG, Ore.—(INS)—Dr. John Craft, CCC Company 928, proved his versatility when he used toothpicks for splints and set a canary's broken leg. The operation was performed without anesthetic, but the bird didn't "peep" once.

FLAMES LEVEL HOME OF BURLINGTON FAMILY

Residence of John Keers is Razed During Absence of Family

CONTENTS ALSO LOST

BURLINGTON, N. J., July 30—A house and contents were totally destroyed here yesterday when the residence of John Keers, Wood street, was leveled by fire.

Twenty feet of telephone cable was destroyed also by the blaze, affecting 85 lines and 20 trunk lines, seven of which were between Mt. Holly and Burlington. Service between Mt. Holly and Burlington was continued by way of Trenton until an emergency crew could make repairs.

The entire fire department responded when a call was sent in by Frank Gilbert from the box at Eighth and High streets. The flames had gained such headway by the time the alarm was sounded it was impossible to prevent a total loss, although fast work by firemen prevented the spread of the flames to the adjoining residence, occupied by Floyd Emmons and family.

John Gilbert, of Mill road, John Hendrickson and Garrett Gauntt of Eighth street were the first on the scene and attempted to carry furniture from the burning home. All they were able to save was an upholstered davenport. Hendrickson narrowly escaped injury as the porch roof collapsed as he was leaving the house.

"The men were forced to break through the door as the family had left the home only a short time before the fire broke out. They also broke into the Emmons home, next door, during the absence of the family, and carried out all of the furniture in fear it would also be burned."

Furniture in the Keers home was not insured. Twenty-five young chicks were destroyed in the flames. Firemen were at a loss to explain the origin of the blaze as there was no fire in the house. An electric switch was known to have been faulty and it is believed this might have been the cause.

The Keers home was a five-room frame bungalow owned by Robert Bartley.

Rebellious Senate Threatens the Program

By William K. Hutchinson
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, July 30—A rebellious Senate threatened to defeat President Roosevelt's wage-hour bill today. Sugar and anti-lynching blocs increased the confusion by battling the administration to force passage of their pet measures before adjournment.

Control of the legislative situation appeared to be passing from the President to an odd coalition of blocs and groups. Some of the opposition units opposed certain legislation; while the sugar and anti-lynching blocs were demanding legislative action.

The President's wage-hour bill appeared doomed when William Green, president, withdrew the support of the American Federation of Labor. Green told a half dozen Senators to vote to recommit the bill. Publicly he announced the Federation would not hold a Senator's vote against the bill as being "against the labor record" of any Senator.

Leaders of the sugar bloc announced they would try to block all legislative activity until the administration agrees to their bill, extending the sugar import quotas that otherwise expire in December. They were conferring today with Secretary of the Interior Ickes, Treasury and Agriculture authorities but with little hope of reaching an amicable agreement.

LICENSED GRASSHOPPERS

The latest grasshopper story from Nebraska relates to the discovery of one which had been so thoughtful as to provide itself with license plates in the form of several 37's marked on its torso. What is lacking in the story is some form of proof that the license number had the stamp of government authority. Without it there is ground for suspecting a license racket group in the streamlined grasshopper world of these modern times.

However, that aside, we do not suppose that a licensed grasshopper is any the less objectionable to the western farmer than is an unlicensed one. It is to be presumed they are equally voracious. The hordes of grasshoppers which have been devastating certain areas of the Middle West in recent years are similar to the locust hordes of Biblical times. The remains of Biblical "locusts" unearthed by archeologists are much like the hoppers of the western plains.

Grasshoppers have always been with the American farmer, but in some areas, also in some seasons, they have been worse than in others. The adult female hopper lays eggs in the ground, usually in the autumn. These hatch out in the following spring, the exact time depending on weather conditions. If the spring is cold and rainy, much of the hopper crop is frozen or rained out. The East may be less troubled with this pest than the West because the East usually has more rain in the spring.

In 1936, the drought area was particularly favorable for a bumper crop of grasshoppers. The spring was hot and dry, so that not only did the hoppers hatch early and in large numbers, but also fewer of their natural enemies were produced. It is possible, also, that somewhat less plowing was done in the drought areas during the spring and the previous autumn; and plowing always kills off a certain proportion of grasshopper eggs by exposing them to the sun and the rain. The 1936 scourge was more severe, also more widespread, than that of 1934.

Not until the hopper is almost fully grown are his wings strong enough for flight. With earlier maturity in 1936 than usual, he was ready to migrate sooner to good crop sections after vegetation had failed him in the drought areas. There is almost no form of green vegetation which is not devoured by some species of grasshopper.

SMART TREASURY

Maybe the Federal Treasury, its prior tax actions this year not having scored hits, searched specially for something sure to go over with a bang. This being the idea, we here and now declare the result an unqualified success.

Filling out income returns on triple bed-sheets has long been Annual Nuisance No. 1 for a large class, the largest reporting. The Treasury's expert Internal Revenue Committee has discovered what all in this class already know—that, when a salary is the only income and only the simplest deductions are involved, then there is no need for the complex forms.

In such cases, a grand relief seems on the way, about the size of a postcard or, at most, a single sheet of letter paper.

Since Whoozis always uses a balcony, it doesn't matter that only five out of a large Western college class could name the seven hills of Rome.

SYNOPSIS

Minnie Fogarty, a product of New York's gas house district is orphaned at the age of 13. The Children's Society comes for her and Minnie escapes down the fire-escape. She seeks refuge with old Pop Dolan, genial brewery watchman. Ensnared in the comfortable office of the idle brewery, which Pop calls her "bood-war," Minnie—the "Princess of Pilsen"—as the old man affectionately nicknamed her—is happier than she has ever been. Then Min learns she has won the Calcutta Sweepstakes. Pop fears Min will now be taken from him and their happy little household broken up. Min's brother, Danny, had left home as soon as he was able, forgetting all about his parents and sister. Now he arrives with his lawyer, Maxie Greenblum, and tries to have Min go with him so that he can share in her fortune, claiming that he is Min's legal guardian. Bill Duffy, handsome young detective, reveals that Danny's wife has just been arrested and is no fit person to care for Min. Danny draws his gun but, before he can pull the trigger, Bill's fist crashes to Danny's jaw. Then comes the news that the report of Min's winning the Sweepstakes is false.

CHAPTER V

Danny Fogarty sat in a corner, nursing an ostrich egg on his jaw. He was Detective Duffy's prisoner on the charge of violating the Sullivan Law; his bride of a day on the way to the Island for having heroin in her possession. Min still clung to Pop Dolan, her soft black hair mingling with his mop of silver. The cop, the reporter and Maxie clattered in to meet Duffy, his splendid shoulders squared, his snappy fedora hat at the perfect angle.

"Hello, Sullivan," he greeted the Lieutenant. "What's the trouble?" "Plenty, Bill. This reporter had will tell the lot of you."

The young man of the press stood staring with popping eyes at Minnie and Pop who, in the sunlit setting of old mahogany, seemed like an old king with his favorite prince.

"Shoot!" commanded Duffy. "Pull up a chair," said Pop.

"The ticket on the sweepstakes was a forgery," explained the reporter.

"Thank the Lord!" cried Pop. "Ow-oo!" moaned Danny of the brideless honeymoon.

"The town has been flooded with these forged tickets," went on the scribe. "The way all the excitement of last night got under way was this: Snuck Weingott, a Yorkville district news tipster, heard that the Fogarty family held a winning ticket and hurried to Mrs. Blutch who sells lottery slips in the little shop next to Cacciatore's junk."

A brief interruption ensued when Danny made a break for the door but was tripped and sat upon by the watchful Bill.

"Say, Pop," pleaded Duffy, "is there any place I could stuff this piece of punk into for a little while?"

"Only the room with the dog. I could bring up Terry," Pop suggested, "and you could lock him below." And they did this.

"Mrs. Blutch," resumed the reporter, "does a neighborhood business and keeps the names and addresses of all the players. Minnie's name was down, her mother having taken out the ticket in her name because she was born with a caul."

Mrs. Blutch told me. Of course, Mrs. Blutch knew about the death of the mother and the father, and that Minnie was living here. The funny part of the thing was that the winners announced in London carried the name of a Minnie Fogarty of Newark, but somehow Newark was changed to New York in the cables. The last editions were going to press, there wasn't time to check and double-check, so the rumor spread that your Yorkville Minnie was in the winning. And, of course, the neighbors wanted Minnie to get a lot of money. Tipsters kept telephoning the newspapers and were making a lot of money until the mistake was corrected.

"The only party gets anything," laughed Duffy, "is Danny. He gets a bride and sock in the jaw."

"It's enough punishment," declared Pop. "Turn him loose, Bill, can't you?"

"Let him sweat for an hour," the detective rejoined.

"Our camera man got a peach of a picture of Minnie when she came running home with the dog last night," the reporter continued. "I brought one with me. See?"

It was stunning! Terry, his old ivories showing, his blind eye making him look like some frightful monster, was up on his hind legs, dragging at the leash, Minnie tugging with both hands, her blue eyes wide with alarm, her black hair flowing above her shoulders—a one-eyed, one-headed Cerberus controlled by Payche. The young man wanted an interview on how it feels to be rich for a day.

"What were you going to do with the half million dollars?" he asked. "Me?" Minnie sat up straight and smiled.

"Tell him, Min," said Pop. "Well, we were going to have a yacht with brass fittings and an organ for one thing."

"Yes, yes, go on," said the reporter, scribbling speedily.

"And Pop and Terry and I were going to visit distant parts and have audiences with kings and emperors, if any."

Terry, sensing in his dog fashion the happiness that "Marriage to Prince of Wales Called Off!" Only the blind and the wholly illiterate would fail to read the story under that sort of screamer.

Andrew Wessel himself, head of the extremely wealthy brewery family, did not read that kind of a newspaper but his son Andrew, Jr., and his two daughters devoured it every morning with their breakfast.

High above the Wessel Brewery, in their Sutton Place penthouse from an east window of which they could have sent a silver spoon tinkling to the roof of Pop's domain, the younger people enjoyed the romance.

"You love bull terriers, Dad," said the Wessel son and heir. "What had come to his friends, giggled over to the reporter and glanced at his notes with his only eye, giving them the O.K. with tapering white tail. . . . Then Pop was thinking of my marrying, you know, and—well, he suggested that while in England he might arrange for the Prince of Wales to ask my hand."

"The ticket on the sweepstakes was a forgery," explained the reporter.

"Is that so?" blurted Detective Duffy. "I'll give you a tip, Queen. You don't marry nobody but yours truly. Get that?"

"O, Mister Duffy!" cried Her Highness, all blushes. "Do you mean that?"

"The reporter can put it in the paper. We're engaged, Queen. William Sarsfield Duffy to Miss Minnie Fogarty, in the holy bonds of matrimony, until death do us part."

"You'll wait for me, Mr. Duffy—for years?"

"And save my money if I have to get down to one suit a year!"

To all the other newspapers the big story of the tenement house girl with a half million had blown up and their city editors had scribbled the name of "Snuck" Weingott, news tipster, on the black list—but to the paper that had jumped into the backwash of the explosion there came a story more interesting than the stirring episode of the day and night before.

The reporter departed with his romance yarn and Detective Duffy descended to the brewery's lower regions to boot Danny Fogarty all the way to the sidewalk and freer-grimly as he turned into the gas house district. He had smelled Pop's still and had heard, faintly, its bubble and squeak. . . . Yes, Pop would supply him with ample funds from week to week or Minnie would be taken over by the Children's Society.

Where the false-alarm stories of Minnie's great stroke of luck had made big headlines the night before and had caused all but a riot in the Gas House district, the yarn that one reporter produced the next day—threatening its way through the daily muck and mess of murder, graft, suicide, bank failures and scandal—made the hearts of readers beat fast with delight. And the picture! Well, everybody loves and promptly falls for a pretty girl and a protecting dog.

Andrew Wessel himself, head of the extremely wealthy brewery family, did not read that kind of a newspaper but his son Andrew, Jr., and his two daughters devoured it every morning with their breakfast.

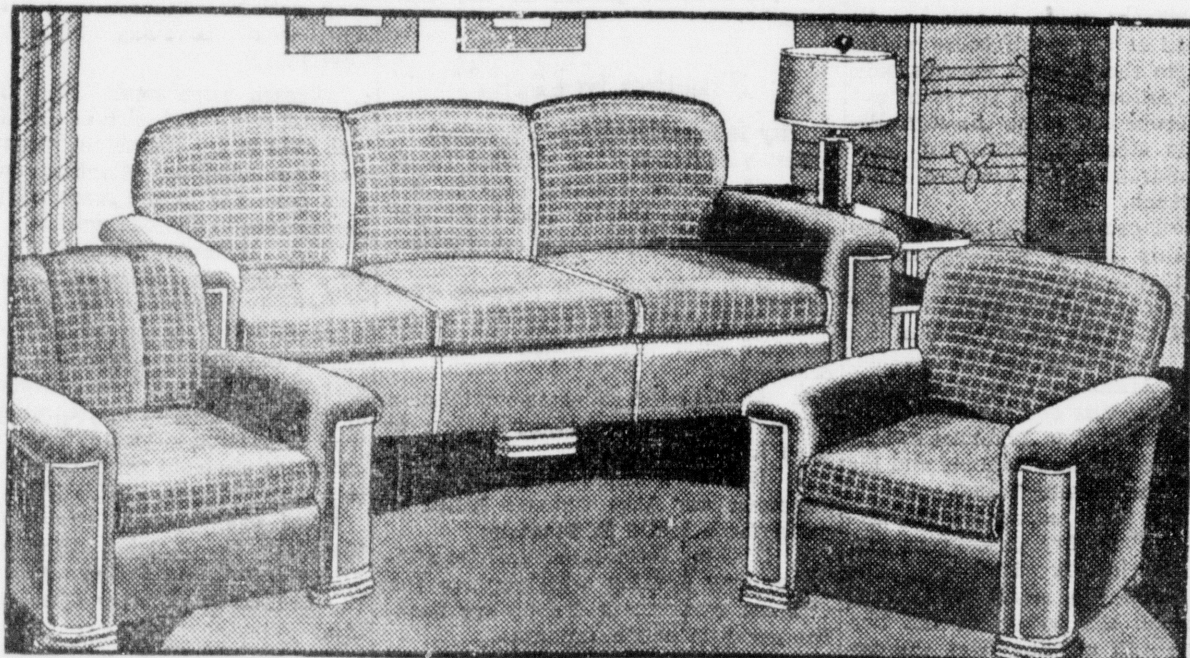

High above the Wessel Brewery, in their Sutton Place penthouse from an east window of which they could have sent a silver spoon tinkling to the roof of Pop's domain, the younger people enjoyed the romance.

HOT WEATHER MENU

USES TWO SALADS

Since hot weather menus are always in demand, here is a "personal appearance" meal that I am glad to pass on to the readers.

In addition to being refreshing, nourishing and appetizing, the greater part of this treat can be prepared in advance. One clever hostess had all these dishes ready and transported them to her Summer home, where an all-day party was in progress.

On the plate for the mid-day meal were individual molded pineapple salads and a generous serving of shrimp salad on lettuce hearts. There were side orders of stuffed and whole olives, hot rolls, iced tea or coffee and iced cakes and salted nuts for dessert. Potato chips or cold cuts might be added attractions.

The tart flavor of the pineapple gelatine blends particularly well with any fish salad, such as shrimp, tuna, lobster or crabmeat. Use any basic recipe for lemon gelatine, or a prepared lemon-flavored gelatine. Pineapple juice should be used instead of water, for added flavor, filling up the measure until there is a pint of liquid. When the gelatine is almost set, beat with an egg beater until foamy choice now is unlimited.

Most vegetables now are at their tender-young best and even in July heat, it is possible to buy wisely and stock them in the uniform coolness of your modern refrigerator. Persuade your green grocer to add a few sprigs of mint and parsley with your vegetable order, for these add that savory extra flair to vegetables.

Boil a spray of mint with small, whole potatoes and with green peas and note the difference. Fresh chopped mint or parsley added to the melted butter you pour over vegetables gives them added interest and flavor. And, of course, the mint is handy for that tall, tinkling glass of iced tea.

There are many ways of varying vegetables, such as adding grated cheese to the cream sauce, or cutting potatoes, large carrots and turnips in novel shapes. The fruit baller may be used, or wield the lattice cutter on raw vegetables, to produce vegetable dainties which will appeal to the children.

Scalloped potatoes are familiar to all families, but why not scallop other vegetables? Use a rich creamy sauce, perhaps with a sprinkling of grated cheese and chopped parsley, and top with toasted crumbs, butter and a dash of paprika. Such a dish may be prepared in the morning and popped in the oven to brown at dinner-time. It also varies the junior vegetable menu, providing extra nourishment.

French fried vegetables, of course, are gaining popularity and modern ingredients make it possible to do them swiftly, so that they are appetizing and healthful.

"BILLY" GALLAGHER WINS HURLING DUEL, 3 TO 2

A hurler's duel between "Billy" Gallagher and "Milt" Jones was decided in favor of the former last evening on the Edgely diamond as the Hibernians gained a 3-2 triumph over the first-place Odd Fellows' nine. The defeat shaved the Oddies' edge on the top notch position of the Bristol Twilight League to one-half game.

Ten hits, including two home runs, was the complete number of safe blows made by both clubs. The four-baggers both came in the initial frame and incidentally the first batter on each team made it with the first ball pitched. Joe Roe, of the Hibs' was first and clouted his into deep left to circle the bags and give his team a 1-0 lead. Johnny Dick, Odd Fellows, evened it with a four-master to center-field in the last half of the frame.

The southpaw slants of Gallagher set back the first-placers with four hits. He whiffed six and did not pass a batter. He retired the last ten batters to face him in order. Jones was touched for six safe knocks. He did not issue a pass and set down eight on strikes.

It has been announced that Monday night, St. Ann's will play the Grundy team on Landreth field.

TRIO OF MARKERS GIVES SUPERIOR ZINC VICTORY

BRISTOL TWILIGHT LEAGUE

ST. ANN'S vs. HIBERNIANS (Leedom's Field)
Umpire, Fields; scorer, Dolan
GRUNDY'S vs. ROHM & HAAS (Maple Beach)
Umpire, Kervick; scorer, Tomlinson

A trio of markers in the last half of the sixth frame gave the Superior Zinc Corporation nine a close 3-2 verdict over the Grundy Mill team last night on Leedom's field as a miscue proved the undoing of Ralph Narcisi, Grundy twirler.

Narcisi blanked the zinc workers for five cantoes and during this stretch allowed but a lone single, a single by Cummons in the fourth. But an error by DiBlassio sent him to oblivion. Williams, first batter in the sixth, singled to center. Vandine then grounded to DiBlassio who errored. Cummons and Bornice went out easily. Stallone singled, scoring Williams. Wright also singled, scoring Vandine and Stallone with the tying and winning runs.

The winning moundsman was Ralph Stromp who gave the woolen makers six scattered hits. He fanned seven and passed one. He was in hot water in the first half of the sixth when Antonelli beat out a hit to short and DiTanna doubled to left but Romig who batted for Muffett was an easy out.

NEW YORK, July 30.—(INS)—In order to still idle and perhaps malicious tongues, William Harold Terry, the man with the glower, is to be signed to a new contract as manager of the New York Giants, within a comparative few hours, according to information that comes to the writer today from someone who isn't talking just to give his adenoids an airing. The club is prepared, I'm assured, to tear up the old document, under which Terry is operating now, and will write another on a one-year basis which, in 1938, will make him the highest priced man in baseball.

Roughly, it will call for approximately $40,000 for next season, with an option of renewal, provided both parties are agreeable. A man can contrive to be pretty agreeable at $40,000.

The ceremony, I'm told, will be President Horace Stoneham's answer to New York sports writers who have been riding Terry like a cross town bus. Moreover, Stoneham is so anxious to make it that it's understood he plans to fly to Chicago on Sunday and declare himself there.

It's also the answer to reports that Mr. "Garrulous" Hartnett, of Chicago, the gent with a paunch like a retired brewer, was to come to the Giants as manager in 1938, with Terry either moving up to the vice-presidency or moving out, at his own wish, to devote himself to outside business interests.

It's the answer, too, to stories that Charlie Dessen was coming here from Cincinnati.

He had been receiving $27,000 a year straight salary with, I believe, some emoluments of a side nature, not clearly defined to those of us who feel that our business is to mind other people's. In other words, Terry already had been getting an income second only to Lou Gehrig who, after a certain amount of reluctance this year, finally consented to accept $35,000, with a bonus of $2,500 for being so accommodating. It is generally believed that Mr. "Diffident" Dean, the St. Louis mite, draws $25,000 for his public-address system.

Briefly, Stoneham has such a "mad" on with the New York writers that not only is he going all the way to another city to divulge his tidings, but is paying something like an additional $8,000 to make it stick. Personally, though, I cannot quite comprehend why the report that he was about to acquire Hartnett, including his second and third chins, should anger him in the least.

I know a lot of people who will take a team of Hartnetts and not get mad at all.

Prepare To Ship Wheat

Philadelphia, July 30.—Grain elevators of the Reading and Pennsylvania railroads buzzed with activity today as preparations were made for the shipping of wheat from Philadelphia for the first time in seven years.

Between 120,000 and 160,000 bushels of wheat harvested in Pennsylvania, Delaware, New Jersey and Maryland will be exported. Vessels for Rotterdam and Antwerp will be loaded this afternoon.

Wives Killed, Husbands Recovering

Salisbury, Md., July 30.—The husbands of two New Jersey women, who were killed in the accident, were recovering today in Peninsula Hospital here from injuries received when their automobile struck a soft shoulder and careened into a pole. The women, with their husbands, were returning home last night from a day's outing at the Wild Horse round-up at Chincoteague Island, Va., when the tragedy occurred.

EDGELY

Miss Catherine Dick spent Wednesday in Abington visiting Freddie Hibbs who is a patient in Abington Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Stackhouse and family, Newtown, were Sunday visitors of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Sheldon.

Mr. and Mrs. John Tait, Philadelphia, spent Sunday visiting friends in Edgely.

Miss Marion Milnor, Bath Road, is spending several days' vacation at the home of Miss Florence Wright.

The following group formed a party Saturday evening, and enjoyed a chicken dinner and dance at the Leedom Farms, Langhorne: Mr. and Mrs. Otto Rohn, Mr. and Mrs. Mark Walters, Mrs. Joseph Dewsnap, Mrs. Mary Watson, Mr. and Mrs. William Grace, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Bergmann, Miss Mary Grace, Mr. Carmen DiCiccio, Harold and Edward Bergmann, Mrs. Harvey Cochran, Bristol, and Miss Evelyn Bell, Philadelphia.

Other survivors were brought to the beach by rescue craft.

Residents of Bayside, a Summer community, threw open their homes to the rescued while police and city officials gave first aid to those who had suffered injuries.

Investigation to determine the cause of the fire was expected to be started at once. Captain Brooks said he believed the blasts were the result of the fire and were not connected with the origin of the blaze. The skipper's theory was that the explosions came when the flames reached several automobiles on the lower deck.

Several of the injured were taken to hospitals by automobiles of Bayside residents and still others by ambulances from Baltimore hospitals.

swept inexorably onward, were finally trapped in the fore part of the top deck. Almost en masse, this group dived over the rail and swam to Bayside, only a few hundred yards from the drifting ship.
